

TOOL BOX TALK

Driving a truck is no easy task. Many accidents across the globe occur with lorries. Sometimes these are fatal ones involving the death of people. It is, therefore, necessary that truck drivers know all the safety measures involved with driving trucks and also follow these safety measures. If you have a business that requires truck drivers, then you should have meetings to discuss trucking safety so that the drivers are kept up to date on safety tips.

Select From 250+ Toolbox Talks ▶ ×

Ad Access to 7-minute Training Collections.
Download Safety Talks, Forms & More.

Safety.BLR

Learn More

Trucking safety meeting topics should not be dull. They should be related to any issues that truck drivers are likely to face. Continue reading on to find out some subjects that you can discuss when it comes to trucking safety.

1. DVIR: Inspecting the truck before the trip

It is a good idea to make sure that everything is working fine before starting a trip. Safety begins with the pre-trip inspection. If this is correctly done, it can aid in preventing mechanical breakdowns along with accidents. This is because it can ensure the truck is in good operating order and is also compliant when it comes to state as well as federal regulations. At the meeting, you can inform the drivers that an excellent pre-trip checkup may only take a few minutes, but can save the driver time along with money in the journey in case some unexpected fault occurs.

Review Fox forms with crew and document if any employees feel if they need any additional training.